ABSTRACT

This document provides 104 tables and associated figures summarizing data on academic degree and certificate completion at public and independent institutions of higher education in Arkansas for 1994-95 and the preceding 5 years. The report is divided into three main segments, beginning with an overview of degree production statewide. Parts 2 and 3 present institutional-level data, initially for the 33 public colleges and universities, followed by parallel summaries for the state's 12 independent institutions reporting to the Arkansas Department of Higher Education. For each of the two sectors, data are summarized in tables according to the individual institutions conferring the award, degree level, program code, and the race and gender of degree participants. The 45 public and independent institutions awarded 16,355 degrees and certificates in 1994-95. Approximately 90.1 percent of the awards were given by the public sector, with the four-year institutions granting a record 10,577 degrees, or 71.8 percent of all public awards. Baccalaureate degrees made up 91.3 percent of the total degrees awarded, an increase over the previous year. (KG)

Executive Summary

ADHE's 1994-95 Degrees and Certificates Awarded by Arkansas Higher Education provides data summarizing academic degree and certificate completion for five years. The report is organized into three major segments, beginning with an overview of degree production statewide. The second and third sections shift to institutional-level data, initially for the 33 public colleges and universities, followed by parallel summaries for the state's 12 independent institutions reporting data to ADHE. For each of the two sectors, data are summarized in tables according to the individual institutions conferring the award, degree level, CIP code of the program, and the race and gender of degree recipients.

Methodology

Data presented in the following tables were submitted by each institution either in its 1994-95 Graduated Student File or on its IPEDS Completions Survey. The data then were aggregated so that programs with the same CIP code at the same degree level were reported as a single number. Because of efforts to eliminate unproductive programs, institutional summaries include a previously deleted degrees line which accounts for those awards.

Highlights

- The 45 public and independent institutions awarded 16,355 degrees and certificates in 1994-95. The awards are the highest number ever conferred annually and represent a 4% increase over the number granted in 1992-93, the first year for which statewide data are comparable due to the addition of the technical colleges.

- Approximately 90.1% of the awards were given by the public sector, with the four-year institutions granting a record 10,577 degrees, or 71.8% of all public awards. This year's total for the universities was 15.8% above 1990-91, with baccalaureate degrees at these schools growing by nearly 900 in that time frame. Bachelor's degrees were 67.5% of the total awards granted by four-year institutions, down slightly from 68.5% reported five years earlier.

- Master's degrees from public institutions expanded significantly (+28.4%) since 1990-91, a trend that ran counter to the same level of degree program in the independent sector. The number of specialist degrees has fluctuated since 1990-91, but awards from doctoral and first professional programs have increased markedly (26% and 36.2% respectively).

- In the two-year public sector, the near doubling in the number of certificates of proficiency since 1992-93 was offset by the major drop in technical certificates (-22.8%). While greater than the 1992-93 total, associate degrees experienced a one-year decline at both the two-year colleges (-5.6%) and the universities (-5.4%).

- The total number of degrees granted by independent institutions peaked in 1991-92 and has declined continuously since then at the associate and baccalaureate levels, dropping by 9.4% over four reporting years.

- As a share of total degrees awarded by independent institutions, baccalaureate awards continue to make up a larger share, increasing from 86.9% in 1990-91 to 91.3% last year.

- Ten CIP codes represented nearly 80% of all associate degrees awarded by public higher education. The combination of two codes--General Studies and Liberal Arts and Sciences--accounted for 36.4% of associate degrees, followed by awards in the health professions (28.7%).

- At the technical certificate level, one-third of the awards went to students completing an LPN program, with the second and third largest numbers for training as an Emergency Medical Technician (7.7%) and Respiratory Therapy Technician (6.1%). The other dominant group of technical certificates (18.7%) was mechanics and repairers of: computers; industrial electronics equipment; HVAC and refrigeration systems; and auto, aircraft, and diesel engines.

- The most common baccalaureate degree awarded in 1994-95 was elementary teacher education, with 638 conferred statewide by the public universities. Five of the ten most productive baccalaureate CIP codes, however were business programs (i.e., accounting, business administration and management, marketing, finance, and general business) which collectively represented 18.9% of the bachelor's degrees. Business, education, and the health professions dominated master's level programs, with each of those fields of study having three entries in the top ten.

- The predominant associate degree awarded by independent institutions was in general studies (39.5%). Pre-nursing was a distant second at 7.9%, followed by business administration/ management (6.6%). Taken together, the ten largest producing CIP codes account for nearly 91% of all associate degrees. Like the public sector, elementary education was the leading baccalaureate degree. Seven disciplines were common to both the public and independent lists of highest producing baccalaureate CIP codes.

- Baccalaureate degrees in teacher education were dominated by five specialities: elementary, physical education, pre-elementary, special education, and English. The most common master's level degrees in teacher education were in the following: counselor education, elementary education, special education, and elementary, middle, and secondary administration.

- The distribution of awards and degrees to Blacks reflected a minor statewide increase during the past three years, from 8.8% to 9.9%. Women, meanwhile were awarded a slightly greater proportion of certificates and degrees, increasing from 55% to 57.4%.
